FARMERS' COLUMN

The Farm and Home

The brooder house should be cleaned three times each week for the first month and at least once a week thereafter. Water and milk containers should be scalded or disinfected every day. Feed hoppers should be used. The chicks will begin to use low roosts when about three weeks old.

Accurate measurements in cooking are always advisable, and especially necessary for inexperienced homemakers. Utensils should be tested for their capacity. To measure flour, sift lightly into a bowl without packing.

Farmers planning any kind of building this summer should write to the college of agriculture for its list of plans. A large number of plans are available for farm houses, cattle, sheep, hog, and mule barns, hog houses, tobacco barns, poultry houses, milk houses, storages, etc.

See that the livestock have salt, which is especially necessary after animals are getting all their living from grass. The best method is to keep salt before stock, but care should be used in getting them accustomed to it.

Eggs should be included in the daily diet of both adults and children. They are a good source of iron and several vitamins essential to growth, health, and vigor. Write to the college of agriculture for a leaflet giving ways of preparing eggs.

Prune shrubs as soon as they have finished blooming. Thin them by removing a few stems but leave the plant with a natural shape. Unless formal effects are desired, do not cut the top so it will be flat.

Farm Policies Feature of Junior Week

A study of national agricultural policies, especially the program of the AAA, is to be a feature of the 14th annual Junior week at the university of Kentucky June 4-9. Five hundred selected farm boys and girls who are outstanding members of the 4-H clubs will attend.

Approximately 60 trained county teams will compete in demonstrating farm and home practices. Prizes will be distributed by the Stewart Dry Goods company of Louisville and the Liggett & Myers Tobacco company.

Other features will be a style show, the winner to receive from the Courier-Journal a trip to the national 4-H style show in Chicago; and health and judging contests.

Lexington pastors, assisted by their respective church choirs, will conduct vesper services each day. The recreational program is to be under the direction of the physical educational department of the university.

Other than members of the university faculty, persons who have donated their services in giving instruction to club members during the week include Miss Sallie F. Hill, editor of the woman's department in Progressive Farmer; Miss Catherine Hanly, of the Central Dairy Council in Louisville; and Miss Vivian Mulholland of the General Baking Company in Louisville.

A Lawmaker Speaks

The following article by a state senator from a neighboring district is a noble contribution to a better understanding of the action of the Kentucky Education association. The article is reprinted from the Point of View column of the Louisville Courier-Journal.

We are hearing much said about politics and politicians these days; much has been said about big interests having a strong political hold on Kentucky. We are now witnessing the entrance of a new organization into the political arena in this state—the K.E.A. I have been a member of the K.E.A. for twenty years; this is the first time, in my experience, that this organization has been pushed into the political arena. This was done by the so-called leaders of education, most of whom belong to that class designated as administrators, while the great group of teachers, who are the backbone of the school, have been in the matter. I have spent the better part of my life in school work, always striving to render service to the boys and girls, and I have not had any political ambitions, but as I have labored for the good of the schools and the community I have seen some very close observations. Speaking as an educator, I wish to reveal some of these:

The first major one which I wish to reveal is that the educational administrators, as a group, there being exceptions to this general rule, are the most crafty and sly of the politicians. They have always been in the political arena, while saying to the corps of workers under them, "you must keep the schools out of politics."

The second is that the ratio between the salaries of the administrators and of the workers under them has been too great. Some of these public school administrators are given a larger salary than the state superintendent of public instruction receives. A too large proportion of the school fund has been going for administrative work, while those doing the real work of the schools have been underpaid. This observation would indicate that those who play politics were securing the real pay from the schools.

This group of narrow, selfish, crafty school politicians is greatly responsible for the plight of the schools. They are a party to the action of the K.E.A. in falling in line with the political faction advocating a sales tax. They are the ones who knew the tricks of the political trade; who joined with the lobbyists in their efforts to bring the interim committee report, the lobbyists, according to the press, are Mr. Polk Laffoon, Mr. Sam Shuckelford, Mr. "Billy" Blair, Dr. Milton Ford, and his excellency the governor. I do not know some of these gentlemen personally, but I find my record where they have left me, and I am interested in the childhood of the state or the acts of the K.E.A.

These school administrators are saying to the merchants on their boards, "Lay out, let us extract from you, or from your patrons, the money to keep us in big salaries." They are saying to the legislators, "Turn up our nose up at the items in your platform, become counterfeit human beings, forget your own honor, and enact a sales tax so that we may have more money." This is all done in the name of the school children of this state. I am willing to join in a crusade to remove the counterfeiters from our school system and put in their places God-fearing human beings whose souls are in their work of producing citizens and not in their pocketbooks. We need to reeducate the public mind, we need to reeducate the will of big interests; their plans included the schools, and they, too, have become submissive. The driving force back of all this clamor for a sales tax is obvious to an honest man. I resent Kentucky being sold out to big interests; I resent the schools being sold out, or being driven into submission to this force. I resent the methods employed by the professional lobbyists in getting my profession into the political cesspool for the schools. We must teach that politics is a science of social service, and that the schools are social servants. On this plane the schools are now and have always been in politics. The trouble has been with those we have entrusted to carry on this important function of society. The system set up by these so-called public servants has led to all that is bad. It is the system that has got Kentucky into this terrible situation. They have put us in the beggar class of states.

The K.E.A. cannot be proud of the acts of their leaders for joining hands with this group of citizens who have bound a rotten system of politics around the neck of Kentucky. I would agree with other writers that the schools must form a bloc to demand their rights and to clamor for the rights of the children of this state, but to join

ROAD NOTICE

To the road overseers of Morgan county:

You are hereby notified and ordered to keep your sections of roads in proper condition. The help we have received from the CWA on roads in no way affects the free labor by which the roads of Morgan county must be maintained. So I am asking not only the road overseers but all good citizens to cooperate to the end that all our public roads be put in proper condition. A good team attached to a drag can accomplish wonders in smoothing up the surface of a road.

The road law is the same law it was five or ten years ago—and it will be enforced.

Respectfully,
W. A. CASKEY, Judge Morgan co.
